

For Your Ears Only

The next time y'all have a hankering for some good old fashioned Country Music we suggest you lend an ear to the JOE POWERS BAND. Headed up by Joe Powers who is a dyed-in-the-wool country crooner and guitar player able to replicate Waylin, Willie, Merle, Hank Sr. and Jr. with amazing accuracy. Sharing the stage is Dayton Osland who actually sits and plays one of the best sounding steel guitars that we have ever heard. When Dayton is not twanging his steel guitar he plays his trusty trumpet an odd combination of instruments but Dayton pulls it off in a big way. Keeping the "Country" beat for the JOE POWERS

da rock critics
Wassup Columnist

BAND is drummer Chris McCoy. Chris does a bang up job and actually throws in a few rock & roll drum rolls that put a smile on our faces! The lead guitarist in this band is Johnny Patton, who we think is a rock guitar hero cleverly disguised as a Country strummer. Johnny laid down some really cool riffs that got everyone's attention as this dude can wail! The last member of this Honky Tonkin' band is Rich Bell with his trusty bass. Rich is a top draw player who has a large following that includes us. The JOE POWERS BAND entertained the masses with plenty of Outlaw Country tunes, a few Southern Rock hits and to our surprise played a soulful set of Motown tunes that blew us away. Our pick of the night was the bands cover of Tom T. Halls "The Year That Clayton Delaney Died". Great job on an old classic! ROCK ON!!!

36 Wassup! Join Us Online at wassuplocal.com